DUMBEST ANIMAL ALIVE

"There is the dumbest animal alive," our guide said, "It is the Jackson's Hartebeest. Our nickname for him is 'Stupid'." Our Uganda mission team was blessed to be taken on a sight-seeing Safari in Murchison Falls National Park. "They are so dumb," he continued "that they will forget that they are running from a lion and stop to eat something. Then they get eaten." Instantly my brain went to Bugs Bunny cartoon mode.

Our van filled with laughter as we imagined scenarios where the idiotic creature would be running from a lion and forgetfully wonder to himself, "Why am I running? This sucks... I need a snack... Oh look! Food." Roar! Crunch. Suddenly the dumb cartoon animal, who gets a piano dropped on his head, was standing in front of me in the flesh. What an idiot. He even looks animated. There he is, the Jackson's Hartebeest, a true life cartoon.

While I got a laugh at the hartebeest's expense, part of me felt bad for it. We laugh at cartoons because they're not real. But here he was, as real as can be. He just looked back at me with a blank stare. No one at home in there. The scary thing is, I saw myself in him. I've seen the danger of sin and evil. I know sin is deadly. I run from it sometimes when the threat scares me. I don't flee because I'm smart, I flee because I'm scared.

"The threat of God's perfect law show's me that sin will destroy me." But I forget. I can be in a dead sprint running from sin, and sin on the way! I forget the warning of St Peter, "Be sober minded. Be watchful. Your adversary the devil prowls around like a roaring lion seeking someone to devour." I'm not just forgetful and stupid about running from sin. Sometimes I'm running straight towards it. I'm twice the fool as the hartebeest. I'm like a real life cartoon, but it's not funny. St Paul says, "I do not understand my own actions. For I do not do the thing I want and I do the very thing I hate." I'm the idiotic creature looking at an idiotic creature in the mirror. There he is in the flesh, looking back at me, a true life cartoon. What a wretched hartebeest I am!
